

WRITING A GOOD OFFER

Once your account is active you will be able to place an 'Offer' on the website. This is your opportunity to advertise what you are available to do to activity organisers. Follow our top tips to make your offer sounds interesting and worthwhile for activity organisers.

Interactive Rocks and Fossils lesson in Glasgow

Number of participants: 30

Age range: 7 - 11 years

Participant type: Students

Offer Type:

Hands on practical

Aim:

For pupils to handle some rocks and fossils and learn about rocks and fossils and the local landscape

Description:

I am a geologist working for a small company in Glasgow. I have been a STEM Ambassador for two years. I have successfully run this session before.

I'm available to do the session on Tuesday or Thursday afternoons.

I will show pupils the basics of how rocks are formed, what fossils are and show some examples. After the session, pupils will be able to describe how a fossil is formed.

The session will take about an hour but can make it shorter or longer to suit.

This is the first thing people will see when they are browsing offers.

Keep the title simple and descriptive. Include your location in the title, or if it's online so people can see at first glance.

Remember this is the name of your activity, not your own name.

Include a short bio about yourself, and any previous experience that is relevant.

Remember to include availability and how flexible you can be

Describe what you will be doing and how it will be done.

General tips:

If your Offer is in support of a bigger activity, campaign or programme include that in the title to make it easy to find. E.g. CREST, Young STEM Leader or Maths Week.

Remember your Offer won't be visible until you 'publish' it. You can withdraw or update it at any time.

If an activity organiser is interested they will express their interest on your Offer and you will be notified. Once you're happy you can 'offer the activity' the activity organiser will then create this as an activity with the agreed date, time and location.